Carol Anderson steps up after breeding grade I winner Mistical Plan

In 2004, on a farm adjacent to the foothills of the Sierra Nevada Mountains in Northern California's Central Valley, a bay filly was born that would change everything for breeder Carol Anderson.

Not many women decide at age 60 to fulfill their dream of purchasing a ranch to launch a Thoroughbred operation, but when the perfect 16-acre parcel of land became available near Gilroy, Calif., Anderson, now 64, couldn't resist.

The same year she acquired the ranch, Anderson's mare Mistical Bel foaled a Game Plan filly that would later be named Mistical Plan.

After J. Paul Reddam offered her a price she couldn't refuse, Anderson sold Mistical Plan privately as a yearling. She never guessed that three years later she would witness the filly capture the Princess Rooney Handicap (gr. I) at Calder Race Course in South Florida.

*A-E and COMPARABLE INDEX: The lifetime Average-Earnings Index indicates how much purse money the progeny of one sire has earned, on the average, in relation to the average earnings of all runners in the same years; average earnings of all runners in any year is represented by an index of 1.00. The Comparable Index indicates the average earnings of progeny produced from mares bred to one sire, when these same mares were bred to other sires. Only 32% of all sires have a lifetime AEI higher than their mares Comparable Index.

Mistical Plan, David Flores up, wins the 2007 Sunshine Millions Oaks

we'd just send Mistical Bel (by Bel Bolide) out to California stallions, and whatever she produced, they were all correct and nice."

Anderson contemplated sending Mistical Bel to a stallion in Kentucky in 2009, but for a long time was undecided on exactly which one. After careful consideration and warding off some criticism, she decided to send her mare to recently retired Kentucky Derby Presented by Yum! Brands and Preakness Stakes (both gr. I) winner Big Brown.

"I was thinking maybe we should get away from the Danzig line and go somewhere else. I like to go to the first-time stallions because you just never know," she said of Big Brown, who is standing his first season at Robert N. Clay's Three Chimneys Farm near Midway, Ky.

Anderson still remembers the unusual occurrences that revolved around the birth of Mistical Plan, who is the third named foal out of her 13-year-old dam.

"The ironic thing about Mistical Plan is she was the last of our babies that were born in Oakdale," she said of the filly, who was raised at Sue Greene's Woodbridge Farm while Anderson and her husband, Jerry, were building a ranch on the land they had bought in nearby Gilroy in 2004. "We were building here, so I never got to see (Mistical Plan) as a foal," said Anderson. "I had pictures of her, but with all the construction going on, I just never got out to Oakdale."

Though Anderson resisted selling Mistical Plan, knowing she might turn out to be something special, she simply couldn't turn down Reddam's offer.

"It was something we knew we could improve our ranch with and be able to send (Mistical Bel) to better stallions," she explained. "We hated to do it because we like to keep them, but it is a business."

Watching from television on the opposite coast, Anderson was ecstatic as Mistical Plan drew away from the field to register a 5<sup>3</sup>/<sub>4</sub>-length score. The win was especially sweet for Anderson because it was her first graded stakes victory as a breeder.

"We had never had a graded stakes winner ever," said Anderson, as she relived her red-letter day. "It was very exciting because it put my mare (Mistical Bel) on the map."

Even though Anderson is elated at how far Mistical Bel has come, it has also made her breeding decisions a lot less simple than they used to be.

"(Mistical Plan's Princess Rooney win) made things complicated," Anderson said with a laugh. "It was easy before..."

Because Anderson had never seen the filly in person, it was also a little easier to let her go than it would have been had she raised her.

Anderson remembers privately purchasing Mistical Plan's granddam, Mistical Mist, as a 3-year-old in 1991.

"My trainer (Gloria Buckridge) caught a glimpse of her somewhere and liked her breeding," said Anderson. "When we bought her, we X-rayed her, and she had chips in both knees. We operated on her and rehabbed her, and she got back and won her first race."

Following the mare's next start, Anderson and Buckridge decided to retire her from racing to become a broodmare. Mistical Bel was Mistical Mist's second foal.

When planning the mating between Game Plan and Mistical Bel that produced Mistical Plan, Anderson looked at the stallion's female pedigree and the success of his grade I stakes-winning dam Cadil-lacing (a full sister to Easy Goer).

"We were trying to upgrade the breeding, and (Mistical Bel) didn't nick that well with Game Plan at the time—they nicked her as a C, but I said, 'Well it's not a D or an F, so let's go for it.'"

Mistical Bel produced a full sister to Mistical Plan in 2008 named Mini Plan, who is currently residing at the new ranch. Anderson hasn't decided whether she will keep or sell the filly.

"As far as what they're telling me, (Mini Plan) is bigger than her sister (Mistical Plan) was," she said. "(Mistical Plan) was really a handful in Oakdale—she was a pistol, in fact. Her mom was too...we would bring a mare in and hope they'd get along, because she was just so dominating. She produces that in all of her kids. Of course, Mini Plan is the leader of the pack of fillies."

Some of Anderson's other mares include Sourcebook (by Avenue of Flags), and Chulla Bel (by Chullo), a daughter of Mistical Bel who is in foal for the first time to local stallion Under Caution, a son of A.P. Indy.

"Most of the mares here, we bred ourselves, and we raced their mothers," said Anderson, who sends her yearlings each year to be broken by trainer Pete Axmaker in Washington state.

Anderson owns Mistical Bel's 4-year-old and 3-year-old foals with her husband and Buckridge, though neither runner has been able to notch any black-type scores...yet.

"I would love to see Bel produce another stakes winner that we own, but, of course, you never know," said Anderson, who currently has four horses in training. "I haven't had the chance to experience that yet."

Anderson has five mares and six foals on her ranch, which is surrounded by dozens of lush vineyards near San Jose.

In addition to enjoying the sight of her Thoroughbreds grazing in the field outside her window at home, Anderson also takes pride in her breathtaking surroundings. Bounded by the Santa Cruz Mountains in the Silicon Valley, Gilroy has powerfully hot summers, but because of the shrouds of fog rolling through the area at night and cooling the ranch, Anderson has never had a need for air conditioning.

"It's so quiet, yet we're only five minutes from all the stores over the hill," she explained. "We've got everything we want. We don't hear traffic—nothing... just hummingbirds and cows mooing. I work out of my home, and my office looks out over all the horses, so it's perfect," she said. "If I see trouble, I drop the books and run."

Well before Anderson made her way into the Thoroughbred industry, she was riding bareback as a child on her first pony at her family's small farm near Oakland, Calif.

"I used to do some riding, and then my dad moved us to the hills, and we had room, so that's how I got my first horse," she explained. "I didn't know how to ride and couldn't afford a saddle. I just had a bridle and a horse—that's how I did it."

Anderson lived the first part of her adult life in Santa Clara County, where her city location prevented her from keeping her horse. She attended San Jose City College and had an original goal of becoming an accountant. After marrying at a young age, however, she wound up working for the government for the next 15 years.

It wasn't until the 1980s that Anderson obtained a Quarter Horse from her brother, Gary Cahoulette, and all the pieces started falling into place for her to enter the horse industry. Cahoulette, who was also breeding and raising a few Thoroughbreds at the time, realized he didn't have enough money to put one of his colts in training.

"I told him I'd help him out, and he knew a trainer in Sacramento, so we sent the horse there," said Anderson. "It was one of the years Sacramento got flooded out, so they had to evacuate all the racing stables. They sent that one horse down to (trainer) Gloria (Buckridge), and that's how I met her."

The first horse Anderson and Buckridge claimed together was a 2-year-old named Coul Walker in 1986. The horse wound up winning two races for the duo, and Anderson was immediately hooked.

"(Buckridge and I) had such good luck (in the beginning)...we were claiming horses and buying them at the sales, and just winning...little races, but we were keeping everything alive," said Anderson, who with her small staff has also rehabilitated a lot of her retired racehorses over the years and sent them off on other career paths, including one who is now a member of the Santa Clara County sheriff's mounted patrol.

In partnership, Anderson found her first black-type winner in the Be a Native mare named Flyinmyway, who captured the 1989 Vacaville Handicap at Solano Race Track. The owner and trainer still have a daughter of Flyinmyway named Flyin R Way at the ranch. When Flying R Way produced a filly by Cherokee Colony in 2001, The Jockey Club allowed Anderson to name the young horse after her granddam, who died of foaling complications in the mid 1990s.

The third-generation Flyinmyway now has a 3-year-old filly and a juvenile colt.

One of Anderson's all-time favorite horses is a retired gelding who now acts as the "guard" of her ranch. The gelding's racing name was Just Envious, but everyone at the ranch calls him "Blaze."

"If anything happens, he lets us know," said Anderson, who explained how her farm is divided into one-acre pastures so her foals have plenty of room to run. "If a horse gets hurt or gets out, I definitely know something's wrong. (Blaze) is 21 years old now, but he goes ballistic in his pasture. We can put babies in with him because he's really great with the little ones, too."

Another of Anderson's most beloved horses is Mistical Bel's 3-year-old son Really Surprised.

"He was our ultimate favorite because he was just so much fun to be around—he was always playing," she explained. "Since we got him here, he just never stopped running circles in the pasture."

Anderson handles the work at the farm along with longtime farm manager Terry Kohler and one other farm employee.

"(Kohler) is my right-hand woman and does wonderful work with the babies, because when they leave here to get broken, they're not afraid of anything," she explained. "We're really hands-on as far as they go. They don't kick, they don't bite, and they're not afraid of people like the vet or the shoers."

Anderson said though her husband, Jerry, isn't directly involved with the horses, he helps supply the funds for her to continue her operation via his five service stations, one of which their daughter, Sherri, manages.

Anderson's days start by taking her granddaughter to school at 7 a.m. and then completing bookwork for the service stations.

"Then, when I have time, I get to go out and play with the babies, so that's my day," said Anderson, who sometimes fills in for Kohler to do the daily chores of feeding and cleaning stalls. "I don't consider that work—to me it's a pleasure."

Coast market, Anderson said, "I don't think there's a secret to my success. I feel like these big ranch owners know more than I do; I'm learning more every day."

For the time being, Anderson runs the majority of her horses at Golden Gate Fields, though she occasionally ships them farther south to campaign at Hollywood Park or Santa Anita. Hopefully, sometime in the future, she will expand her horizons when a new superstar comes along.

"We've run a few at Del Mar, but not since it's been synthetic," she said. "Once we get a horse we see is better than the rest, that's when we'll head down south to see if they're as good as we think they are."

It seems that both Anderson and Kohler's sheer adoration and passion for their horses have caused the pair to have such success from their work.

Kohler stressed how the hands-on approach has made all the difference in the way the horses behave and perform.

"Because we don't have more than 100 horses here, it's easier to really give each horse a lot of face time," she explained. "It also develops a partnership with the horse. It's not as though we're imposing this athleticism and this career on the horses; we really do cultivate the horses that have an aptitude toward running and are competitive with each other. The horses know we're there to help them and to work with them, develop them, and make them into well-adjusted athletes."

Kohler told how during a recent fire that swept through Gilroy and came dangerously close to Anderson's ranch, the horses didn't panic.

"They were calm; they were cool," she said. "The whole back side of the ranch was just glowing orange with flames. It's amazing how willing the animals are to work with us because we are so close to them. They have an understanding, and it's interesting how when you develop a trust with an animal to that extent, it's quite rewarding, and they give back tenfold what you give them." □
