Giant Start

Frost Giant is paying off for Andrew Cohen

BY LENNY SHULMAN

ANDREW COHEN, 57, is an amiable man, quick with a quip even if the punch line is inflicted upon himself. He has carved out a big career on Wall Street but doesn't pretend to be all-knowing. He does enjoy action—he's the kind of guy who would rather participate playing baseball at a fantasy camp than assemble a fantasy team on paper, even though running the bases and diving for balls means gulping Advil in bulk for the following week or two.

All of which explains his decision to gamble big on Frost Giant—a horse he co-owned during a solid if not spectacular race career—making it as a sire. That bet is paying off, as the son of Giant's Causeway became the leading second-crop sire in the Northeast last year, his first crop of 3-year-olds excelling beyond everyone's expectations except, perhaps, Cohen's.

The Brooklyn native built up a firm on Wall Street that made markets in 300 companies. Attracted to harness racing, he owned a couple of trotters just for kicks but had no interest in Thoroughbreds until an unlikely meeting in the financial district.

“My analyst, probably the most conservative person I’ve ever met, came to me one day and wanted to introduce me to somebody who wanted to talk about buying horses,” said Cohen. “I looked at her like she was drunk. But I took the meeting, which is how I met Mike Iavarone and Richard Schiavo from IEAH (International Equine Acquisitions Holdings) and invested in a Thoroughbred. That horse did so well I invested in another. We had a tremendous run of luck in the beginning.”

That run included Cohen co-owning horses such as Kip Deville, Benny the Bull, Wonder Lady Anne L, Frost Giant, and dual classic winner Big Brown, among others.

“It was crazy,” said Cohen. “The first year we had about 10 grade I winners. I thought, ‘This is great.’ The race would start and I’d say, ‘Where’s the winner’s circle?’ Not being cocky, but just spoiled.

Cohen enjoyed early success with Richard Schiavo (center) and Mike Iavarone of IEAH

I’ve since learned that it’s not quite so easy as it seemed in the beginning.”

As IEAH began to implode, Cohen

Frost Giant covered 139 mares last year at Keane Stud felt the urge to go out on his own. He owned about 75% of Frost Giant by the time the colt retired from racing in 2008 and, having gotten his feet wet on the breeding side when Big Brown went to stud, Cohen traded his interest in Benny the Bull and eventually bought everyone else out of Frost Giant.

“Being from Brooklyn, I wanted to stand him in New York,” said Cohen. “I was optimistic about the casino at Aqueduct finally coming online, and so New York seemed like the right spot. The timing ended up being good: The New York program is the best one out there, and it all came to fruition. This is where I’d want to be.”

Frost Giant, out of the Gone West mare Takesmybreath-away, was bred in Kentucky by J.M.J. Stables. The flashy chestnut with a broad blaze and three white feet was a strong enough specimen to bring $600,000 from Cool-more’s Demi O’Byrne at Keeneland’s 2004 September yearling auction. Beginning his racing career in Europe, Frost Giant, in his second start, won the 2005 Killavullan Stakes (Ire-III) and the following year added the Bruce Betting Kilternan Stakes (Ire-III), both at Leopardstown. He failed, however, to hit the board in group I company in England in 2006, leading to IEAH’s being able to purchase him and bring him Stateside to run. His big score came in the 2008 Suburban Handicap (gr. I), and he was retired after that season with a bankroll of $454,630.

Cohen, still green when it came to the breeding side of the business, got as much advice as he could gather before sending Frost Giant to Empire Stud in New York, which eventually morphed into Vinery.

“That turned out not to be a perfect fit,” said Cohen, “but happily it led us to Keane Stud and Dr. Winslow Stevens and Philippe Lasseur, who take great care of the horses and follow-up on what they say they will do, and we couldn’t be happier.”

Frost Giant entered stud in 2009 but was having trouble getting off the ground, attracting just a modest number of mares his first couple of seasons. Concerned, Cohen called in Eric Bishop, whom he'd met during the IEAH days. Bishop, a retired New York City Police Department officer who headed a mounted unit, is the son of Thoroughbred trainer Buddy Bishop and was the construction manager of the equine hospital IEAH built next to Belmont Park.

"I've bought and sold horses and have been in and out of the business for some time," said Bishop. "Andrew wasn't sure he was getting the right treatment on his stallion and asked me to help. I think Frost Giant comes from a great family, and I'd always liked the horse, so I signed on.

"Even though his runners hadn't yet hit the track, people were believing the casino was finally going to happen and New York was coming around. So we were in the right place at the right time even though Frost Giant was unproven. Then, once his 2-year-olds hit the ground running in 2012, that sparked an amazing amount of interest. We didn't expect precocious 2-year-olds; we were thinking 3-and-up and going two turns. So when they started beating up on New York-bred 2-year-olds, he sold himself, and the quality of mares jumped up. We had no black-type mares in the first few seasons, and he was only getting 30 or so mares each year. All of a sudden the sharpies saw him as the real deal—a Kentucky stallion standing in New York."

When one considers what Frost Giant's first crop accomplished last year, it is small wonder folks are sitting up

As his progeny's successes snowballed, Frost Giant found himself increasingly busy.

"We had to close his book; we could have booked 175, but I don't believe in that. People were calling with six, eight, 10 mares for him, and we had to call back and say, 'Pick your best one; that's all we can do.'

business. I tend to learn things the hard way, and you definitely get schooled some as you go, but I think I'm starting to get the hang of it. In another 20 years maybe I'll know what I'm doing."

Cohen, who is based in Florida most of the year, races under the banner of Sunrise Stables. Giant Finish is one of a half-dozen 4-year-olds Sunrise has in training, and is being pointed for a turf start because he ran well on the Turfway Park Polytrack last year. Sunrise has another half-dozen 3-year-olds at the races with a handful of 2-year-olds coming up behind them, and 10 yearlings. Cohen enjoys bringing in partners with whom he gets along to make racing a fun experience for all. Mike Hushion and Linda Rice train many of the Sunrise runners.

"It's been a real adventure coming out with a stallion," Cohen said. "Our homebreds are doing well, especially considering the Frost Giants tend to be big horses that generally take time to come around. We love to race and put them in the right hands, and we've been fortunate to find good trainers. It's rewarding to see them be successful, like the time you put into it is paying off. And we're really just starting, now that we're getting nicer mares to him. I think he's really going to show his stuff across the country.

"My hope is that in a few years I'll be able to sit back, put my feet up, and watch the Frost Giants run." BH
